The sermon starts with a story about fake sunglasses. Can you think of a time when you bought something that looked good at first but didn't last? How might this relate to our church experiences?

Sam talked about moving beyond stale donuts and bad coffee to real friendship. What's your favorite memory of experiencing genuine fellowship with other Christians? What made it special?

Sometimes we hold back from church relationships because we're afraid of getting hurt. If you're comfortable sharing, how have you seen God help heal or restore a difficult relationship in your life?

The early Christians shared their possessions freely. What do you think that should look like today? What is holding you back?

The first church met "day by day." Do you think the frequency of church participation changes one's connection with the church?

Acts 2:46 shows people eating together with glad and sincere hearts. What makes such small group gatherings particularly meaningful? What could make them even better?
